

Carlos Calvillo | Assistant Chief, Los Angeles Fire Department

Carlos Calvillo is an Assistant Chief with the Los Angeles Fire Department (LAFD) with more than 38 years of fire service experience. He currently serves in the Department's Operations South Bureau and has held leadership and command assignments spanning emergency operations, hazardous materials, Urban Search and Rescue, communications, and emergency management.

Throughout his career, Calvillo has commanded and served in senior leadership positions on numerous complex incidents, including major structure and industrial fires, wildland-urban interface incidents, maritime and Port of Los Angeles emergencies, and large-scale planned events.

His experience also includes leadership roles with FEMA California Task Force 1 (CA-TF1), deploying to major disasters throughout the United States, as well as leadership assignments within both the Los Angeles Fire Department and City Emergency Operations Centers.

Calvillo holds a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration from California Coast University and is a graduate of USC's Executive Leadership Program and LAPD's WestPoint Leadership Program. He has also served as an instructor with the LAFD's WestPoint Leadership Academy, helping develop and mentor future fire service leaders.
