

Joseph Allen Biography

Joseph Allen is currently the CEO of Six Maritime, a renowned international maritime security company. His current projects focus on collaborating with OEMs, government agencies, and industry leaders to develop advanced maritime security models. He emphasizes integrating technology, sensors, AI, and autonomous systems with traditional staffed assets to create an optimal defensive force in the maritime field that can address modern warfare and terrorist threats.

Mr. Allen began his professional career as an officer in the United States Navy, serving for a total of 18 years of active duty and reserve service holding several roles including: navigation officer, electrical engineering officer, communications officer and diving officer. He has worked as a research scientist studying stormwater discharges and marine sediment. He was a Deputy City Attorney for the City of San Diego, serving time as a prosecutor and a civil litigator. In his current role as CEO of Six Maritime, Mr. Allen works with the Department of Defense, Homeland Security, several state and local authorities around the country, port and terminal owners, vessel owners and operators, thousands of maritime industry workers and countless private companies to help identify and mitigate maritime security threats posed to them from all sources. He currently resides in San Diego, CA with frequent travel to other domestic and international ports around the world.