

Supervising Deputy Fire Marshal Matthew Salmon serves with the San Diego Fire-Rescue Department, overseeing the Hazardous Materials and Technical Services Program. He leads efforts to reduce potential hazards through education, enforcement of safety codes, and promotion of best practices among businesses that use or store hazardous materials or conduct hazardous processes.

A former Fire Captain assigned to the department's Hazardous Materials Station, Marshal Salmon brings extensive operational experience to regulatory and response coordination efforts. His background provides a critical bridge between field operations and prevention programs, ensuring a proactive approach to community safety and environmental protection.

Marshal Salmon is recognized for his leadership in hazardous materials management, code enforcement, and technical expertise in complex chemical and industrial safety operations.
